President's Message

When reflecting upon the 2020-21 academic year, I'm reminded of a quote from Nelson Mandela: "It always seems impossible until it is done."

While COVID-19 has remained longer and caused more disruption than we ever imagined, Johnson C. Smith University is excited to mark the 2020-21 academic year a success. Many experts around the world thought it would be impossible for a four-year institution to educate its students remotely during an evolving pandemic. But thanks to the diligence of our faculty, staff, students and community, JCSU was able to continue offering a top-tier education despite the decision to pivot to fully remote learning and working.

JCSU was also able to act as a beacon of light for the Historic West End of Charlotte this year. Although each of us had our own personal battles and losses, the Golden Bulls rallied together to give back to our community with the help of several local partners. For example, we hosted the first widespread distribution of the Johnson & Johnson vaccine in Mecklenburg County.

And, of course, none of that would be possible without the contributions made by our generous alumni and donors. We know the financial toll the pandemic took on this nation. Perhaps now more than ever, your choice to give to JCSU speaks volumes to your commitment toward developing strong future leaders with a passion for making a positive impact on the world around them.

As we move forward in the coming years, we can certainly look back on 2020-21 and remember that we overcame the impossible, but we only did so together. Thank you for supporting Johnson C. Smith University and helping us put possibility into perspective for our students and community, no matter the challenges we may face ahead.

Sincerely,

Students celebrated the success of the classes of 2020 and 2021 after a full year of remote learning during Commencement Exercises in May.

Campus Community Celebrates Two Classes of Graduates After Year of Remote Learning

A deadly virus in the most populous city in North Carolina caused JCSU to halt in-person learning for the 2020-21 academic year.

But JCSU administration, faculty and staff were determined to offer a remote experience. A journey that started with online learning ended with in-person Commencement Exercises.

“Without cooperation from the entire campus community, these changes would not have been possible,” said Dr. Karen D. Morgan, senior vice president of Academic Affairs. “We came together, as Smithites are known to do, for the benefit of the campus community to make the transition as smooth as possible for our students and their families, as well as for our faculty and staff.”

Like many colleges and universities, JCSU’s switch from in-person to fully remote learning was a challenge. One roadblock came from limited resources. Faculty, staff and students needed access to mobile technology and a way to connect to campus servers remotely.

The campus IT team helped faculty and staff access Cisco’s AnyConnect program, which allowed them to log into their work computers securely from home, giving them access to the files they’d need to teach their courses.

Dr. Anita Bledsoe-Gardner, associate professor of Criminology, has been teaching on campus for 13 years and is no stranger to online learning. Though she had experience in developing courses for online students, she understood the issues other faculty faced as the University went fully remote.

“I know for other faculty members, changing from traditional to online learning was a challenge,” she said. “But, given the limited resources we had, I think faculty did an outstanding job, and I think we also do that in a traditional setting.”

The classes of 2020 and 2021 received their diplomas during social distanced exercises at Bojangles Coliseum.

Bledsoe-Gardner said that empathy went a long way in helping students through a once-in-a-lifetime pandemic.

“We all were going through COVID,” she said. “It wasn’t a student thing or a professor thing, it was a human thing. We learned that the need to have that empathetic ear and understand students’ needs was elevated. We understood and we were living it too.”

Dr. Terza Lima-Neves, chair of Social and Behavioral Sciences and associate professor of Political Science, agreed with Bledsoe-Gardner.

“Statistics show that women professionals were disproportionately impacted by the pandemic because we were expected to figure out child care as well,” she said. “Similar to most professionals who are women and parents facing similar issues, managing my family and professional responsibilities impacted my physical and mental health.”

Lima-Neves adapted her classes to include more small group discussions, visual aids and special speakers in order to keep students engaged online.

But college life doesn’t just happen in the classroom.

“Students are our lifeblood,” said Dr. Davida Haywood ’98, vice president of Student Affairs. “Outside the classroom, we have to provide opportunities for students to get engaged so they feel empowered and transform themselves.”

The Student Affairs team combatted pandemic boredom with a number of programs that were held via Zoom, including Coffee and Prayer, Aux Cord Wars and a night of conversation between the current JCSU royal court, and former queens and kings.

Ashley Nicole Bellinger ’21 had just been elected Miss JCSU before the decision was made to close campus because of COVID-19.

“I was a virtual COVID queen,” Bellinger said to Qcity Metro. “We were all very panicked at first, because no one know what Ashley Bellinger, 2020-21 Miss JCSU, talks with a fellow student on campus.

COVID was back then. I went from being able to have study groups to just being alone in my bedroom at home in Miami, Zooming in to class and trying to figure it out.”

But COVID didn’t stop Bellinger’s reign. She was able to represent JCSU at community functions, and speak during virtual events held by organizations on and off campus.

Haywood, who was Miss JCSU in 1997-98, put together a small coronation for the 2020-21 royal court before the year ended. Haywood said keeping students engaged online after a long day of classes on Zoom was difficult, but she was thankful for the times a few students could come gather on campus safely to serve the community.

“One event that comes to mind is the vaccine clinic we hosted in partnership with Atrium,” she said. “It was great to see campus light up that day, and was a great opportunity for JCSU to be a beacon of light to the West End.”

Though students could come together to volunteer for a few events, Morgan recognized that services which typically met in person, such as the tutoring and career readiness centers, would need to be available to students virtually. Through partnerships with Coursera, Forage and dedicated JCSU staff, the campus was able to offer supplemental experiential learning and engage students in a virtual setting.

As students faced the challenges of learning remotely, being stuck indoors and being unable to have a traditional college experience, the administration recognized the importance of making mental health care accessible to all students.

“We worked closely with our colleagues in the Counseling Center to provide assistance where needed as we saw increased levels of distress and anxiety,” said Morgan. “Though there was some frustration due to a desire for an in-person experience, we had to think of the overall safety of the campus community.”

Morgan said she is astounded by the resilience of the JCSU campus community, and is, of course, looking forward to the day when she can once again see the smiling faces of students, faculty and staff around campus.

“Faculty and staff proved their commitment to excellence both in and outside the classroom by providing students with a holistic, high-quality collegiate experience,” said Morgan. “Students proved their capacity to quickly pivot, and to be the light for future generations of Smithites who may have reason to make quick changes.”

Following an entire semester of remote learning, students, faculty and staff saw the light at the end of the tunnel when administration announced it would host a Baccalaureate Service and Commencement Exercises for the classes of 2020 and 2021 combined.

Though masks were worn, and social distancing was practiced, no one could stifle the joy felt during the exercises. Commencement was held at the Bojangles Coliseum where U.S. Rep. Alma Adams delivered the keynote address.

“Today is your day, and you have every reason to be proud,” said Adams, who is also a member of the Congressional Black Caucus. “Look at you, you made it! You have reached this day because of your resilience, your tenacity and your talent while overcoming challenge and adversity, including a pandemic.”

More than 500 Smithites crossed the stage to receive their undergraduate and graduate diplomas.

“I want to commend each of you today for you have made the ascent to the pinnacle of excellence,” said JCSU President Clarence D. Armbrister. “I am sure each of you is prepared for success in all that you will undertake.”

JCSU was proud to celebrate the classes of 2020 and 2021. Through determination, grit and the unbreakable Smithite spirit, JCSU closed out the year highlighting the many successes of its graduates.

JCSU Boosts Campus Safety and Community Service Through COVID-19 Relief Efforts

In the wake of a devastating pandemic that made health and safety unpredictable, JCSU became an institution the Charlotte community could count on.

From community-wide vaccination clinics to vaccine hesitancy education and supply giveaways, JCSU made an impact on the people of Charlotte.

“As a historically Black university, it’s pertinent we are doing our part to assist the community, especially Black Americans, disproportionately affected by coronavirus,” said President Clarence D. Armbrister.

An initial assessment of U.S. vaccine distributions revealed that only 8 percent of Black citizens had received the COVID-19 vaccine, although these citizens make up 13 percent of the U.S. population.

This startling statistic astounded JCSU and led to a partnership with Atrium Health. Thanks to this partnership, more than 6,000 local teachers and residents were able to receive the Johnson & Johnson one-dose vaccine in mid-March 2021.

“Getting the COVID-19 vaccine is an educated decision,” said Dr. Gary Little, chief medical officer for the Charlotte Region at Atrium Health. “What better place to provide this opportunity for teachers [and the community] than an outstanding institution of higher learning like Johnson C. Smith University?”

Prior to the vaccination clinic, JCSU decided to tackle a bigger issue that may have been keeping the community away from vaccination clinics: vaccine hesitancy.

People around the globe were unsure about taking the vaccine. Not only did rumors circulate that the vaccine could infect a patient with COVID-19, but there were also rumors that it was prepared too quickly, which made many think it would be ineffective or cause more harm than good.

Additionally, many minority communities continue to be wary of taking vaccines due to a history of abusive medical trials that devastated families and entire communities of color.

No matter the cause, vaccine hesitancy has impacted families for generations, so JCSU and Atrium Health facilitated a virtual discussion, "Addressing COVID-19 Vaccine Hesitancy in Our Communities" in March.

The panelists included Dr. Tiffany Little, educator and author; Dr. Katie Passaretti, medical director of Infection Prevention at Atrium Health; Dr. Gary Little; and Dr. Raynard Washington, deputy health director at Mecklenburg County Health Department.

The panel worked together to dispel mistruths and explore concerns about the vaccine.

In September 2020, JCSU hosted the Carolina Panthers and Atrium Health for the Million Mask Initiative on campus. Volunteers distributed more than 35,000 masks to residents in the Historic West End of Charlotte. Residents drove through a line to receive their masks, but several more masks were donated to local schools, churches and nursing homes in the area.

In December 2020, JCSU teamed up with Samaritan's Feet, Councilman Malcolm Graham '85 and CIAA Commissioner Jacqie McWilliams to distribute 800 pairs of shoes at a drive-through giveaway on campus during the holiday season.

Samaritan's Feet is a non-profit with aspirations to create a world with no shoeless children. During the COVID-19 pandemic, many were laid off or lost working hours at their jobs, making affording necessities like tennis shoes more difficult.

During the distribution, more than 800 families received a "Hope Tote" that not only contained a new pair of athletic shoes, but also socks, a hygiene kit and a note of encouragement.

"The work of Samaritan's Feet is nothing less than remarkable," said Tami B. Simmons, vice president of Institutional Advancement at JCSU. "Protecting one's feet is to protect one's health and safety. Therefore, donating shoes is an opportunity to care for one another."

And JCSU learned during the COVID-19 pandemic that working together is the best way to look out for the health and safety of the most vulnerable in its community.

President Clarence D. Armbrister was the first to receive the vaccine during the clinic.

JCSU Encourages Golden Bulls to Rush the Polls During Election Season

Destiny Ellis '24, an 18-year-old freshman in the Communication Arts program, was one of many students at JCSU impacted by COVID-19.

Although the campus was operating remotely amid an ever-evolving pandemic, JCSU was determined to make sure Ellis and her fellow students exercised their right to vote in the 2020 election.

Ellis said voting was important, and that it was time for her generation to stand up and get involved.

"A lot of people I look up to and my older peers vote," she said. "But we are the next generation, and we need to be able to cast our vote – whether Democrat or Republican. It's exciting to finally be able to vote, especially during this election."

As a part of its mission to produce future leaders and global citizens, JCSU launched the "Bull Rush the Polls" campaign in 2020. The goal of the campaign was to educate students, faculty and staff on early voting, voter registration and absentee voting.

Many students would be casting their vote in an election for the first time, so it was important for the University to step in and make voter education a priority.

The 2020 election was a close one. No matter which side of the aisle took the president's seat in the White House, the results would be life-changing.

"We are urging them to use their influence to make positive change," said Frank Dorsey, associate director of Student Engagement at JCSU.

According to Inside Higher Ed, JCSU was not the only University that had students turning up at the polls in record numbers in 2020. Voter turnout among college students jumped to a record-high of 66 percent, a whopping 14 percent higher than the turnout for the previous election.

JCSU's massive participation in the Bull Rush the Polls campaign attracted local media attention. Spectrum News Charlotte broadcasted live across North Carolina from campus on election night, interviewing President Clarence D. Armbrister, Mecklenburg County Sheriff Garry McFadden '81, City Councilman Malcolm Graham '85 and several students.

But the work began months ahead of Election Day, with the entire JCSU community engaging in initiatives to improve voter turnout among students, faculty and staff.

The James B. Duke Memorial Library team hosted a virtual program in late October called "Diverse Voices of Women in the Movement," which highlighted the importance of Black women voters.

Also in October, U.S. Rep. Alma Adams hosted a voter education town hall which featured Isys Seward '24, a political science major at JCSU.

On Nov. 13, 2020, Joe Biden was officially named the winner of the U.S. Presidential election, and Kamala Harris, an HBCU graduate, was named Vice President. Harris is the first woman of any race to serve in this role, making her the highest-ranking female official in U.S. history.

After the announcement of the winners and the conclusion of the Bull Rush the Polls campaign, media interviewed Armbrister on the incoming Biden-Harris administration.

"The idea of a woman of color becoming a Vice President here in the United States is just wonderful, and the fact that she went to an HBCU makes it even more special. Young people today can look up and say, 'you know what, that could be me one day!'"

And JCSU knows its students are bound for greatness. With a mission to produce future leaders, innovators, entrepreneurs and game-changers, an initiative like Bull Rush the Polls is just one way JCSU is lighting a path toward a brighter tomorrow in Charlotte and beyond.

Spectrum News selected JCSU as the site for its election night special coverage, which was broadcasted across North Carolina from 6 p.m. to midnight.

Students and staff thanked voters at Beatties Ford Library Oct. 27, 2020, and Wallace Pruitt Recreation Center on Election Day, Nov. 3, by distributing JCSU swag and "I Voted" stickers as voters left the polls.
