Message from Dr. Carter

This 2010-2011 President’s Report highlights achievements that are strengthening the future of this special place of learning. I am exceptionally pleased with the efforts of students, faculty, staff and friends who make it possible for us to achieve greatness.

Johnson C. Smith University has made significant strides this past year toward becoming Charlotte’s premier independent urban University, providing a first-class education to top achieving students. Thanks to our strong working relationships with funders, we have been able to accomplish great things. Their commitment has created transformational change which continues to take place on campus and in our adjacent community.

Our student body continues to grow with promising and enthusiastic scholars who are eager to learn and willing to invest in their own intellectual and social development. Students at JCSU are more academically prepared and also more diverse than ever before. Enrollment at the Metropolitan College is also flourishing as we offer innovative certificate programs and a blend of online courses that meet the needs of our adult learners.

While attracting new students is important, retaining them is just as critical. Therefore, the University is taking proactive measures to increase the graduation rate. JCSU is proud to have been selected by the White House for a unique “proof-of-concept” project that will use the principles of Blue Ocean Strategy to examine the University’s retention and graduation rates.

One of the best experiences of the year featured our 139th Commencement. Our honored speaker was Nomzamo Nobandla Winifred “Winnie” Madikizela-Mandela. She provided inspirational words and an example of transformative leadership through her life experiences in South Africa’s period of radical change.

Johnson C. Smith University hopes to follow her example of courage as we strive to create a more vibrant and unified community just outside our gates. This past year we broke ground on two exciting projects that will help accomplish this mission – The Arts Factory, which is now open, and Mosaic Village, which is set to open in the fall. Both projects are part of the redevelopment plan for the Northwest Corridor.

Last fall also marked the grand opening of the Center for Spiritual Life, which serves as a catalyst for our students to strengthen their spiritual base. The center plays a critical role in the life of the campus as it serves to facilitate spiritual and religious dialogue. We are especially pleased to have Donnie Shell, former member of the Pittsburgh Steelers and four-time Super Bowl winner, to lead the new center as our director.

From the beginning and throughout this past academic year, we have been strengthened spiritually, intellectually and physically by the commitment of all who believe in our mission and give their time and resources to make progress possible.

Very best wishes,

Dr. Ronald L. Carter, Ph.D.
President
Pursuing Academic Excellence

Cato donation awards teaching excellence

Faculty will have greater opportunities for professional growth with a $350,000 grant from the Cato Corporation. The Cato Par Excellence Teaching Award recognizes outstanding faculty performance annually and provides a cash stipend for professional development. Dr. Brian Madison Jones, assistant professor of history in the College of Arts and Letters, received the first award.

Students gain enriching experiences on campus and abroad

The College of Arts and Letters has enhanced its educational offerings to students, ranging from internships to study abroad opportunities. Last year a Communication Arts Advisory Board was established by the College of Arts and Letters to review the communications internship program and provide advisement on designs for a broadcast journalism teaching lab that is currently planned.

The Writing Central in the Department of Languages and Literature expanded with a full complement of services for students. The department also completed the first publication of a writing collection titled The Saturday Writers that joins Johnson C. Smith University with student writers from International House in Charlotte.

Students enrolled in the College of Arts and Letters Signature Program gain practical experience as interns in public history and archiving through the Department of Social and Behavioral Sciences. Darius Melvin became the first student from the Chinese language courses to study abroad in China. The interdisciplinary studies major spent the summer of 2011 studying at Beijing Normal University as a recipient of the Barry A. Claytor Scholarship. Marla Goins spent a semester studying abroad in the Dominican Republic on Benjamin A. Gilman and CIEE travel scholarships.
The Freedom School Partners Summer Scholars Program, offered through the Department of Education, reaches out to 40–50 students in grades one through six to offer academic support and self-esteem building. Johnson C. Smith University was the first institution of higher learning to host a site. Our student interns majoring in education, health and human performance gain practical experience as they serve as effective mentors for this program.

Within the College of Professional Studies, the social work department’s Foster Care Initiative provides sustainable skills and support for foster youth who are aging out of the system. A white paper on the Foster Care Initiative, funded by The Duke Endowment, has been completed to offer further direction for this key initiative.

The Department of Business Administration and Economics retail management program continues to enhance the marketing skills of business majors with a marketing concentration through internships and informative programs. One such program featured a panel discussion with some of the city’s most prominent business leaders: Herb Gray, Dr. Paula Newsome and Max Siegel, who shared their experiences on the road to success. An annual breakfast brought retailers to campus to talk about their needs and encourage students to apply for internships.

A white paper on social entrepreneurship and minority business has been completed by the department and delves into the status of minority business owners in Charlotte. It is often used as a lead-in to discussions with the business community and provides guidance for selecting market-driven certificate programs at the Metropolitan College.

The annual spring Health Fair offered through the Department of Health and Human Performance provided a valuable service to the students and local community with general information and testing on health issues impacting minorities, including nutrition. Students typically help organize this event to gain practical experience, while faculty provide the leadership and actual testing.
Smith Institute of Applied Research opens new lab

Now in its third year, the Smith Institute of Applied Research has established a significant presence for our faculty and students in the applied and theoretical research institute communities. The University is actively collaborating with the Santa Fe Institute, ranked as one of the top 10 research facilities in the world. As an invited participant, the University seeks to develop funded partnership with the United States Department of Education’s Institute for Education Sciences in applied quantitative and qualitative educational research methods.

The University opened a fully instrumented, state-of-the-art Multidisciplinary Applied Computational Modeling and Simulations (MACMAS) lab for undergraduate students and JCSU faculty. The MACMAS lab supports faculty-led student research in collaboration with major research institutions, including the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and the North Carolina Biotech Research Campus. The lab opening was attended by the heads of research for the United States Department of Education and the executive director of the White House Initiative for HBCUs. Other key attendees included the vice president of the Santa Fe Institute, heads of university research departments throughout the Southeast region, rural and small city school district leaders, along with JCSU board members, distinguished alumni, faculty, staff and students.

Smith Institute for Applied Research has developed and funded approximately $250,000 for faculty and mentored student research over the past two years. The funds also cover paid student-level applied research internships.
Metropolitan College meets educational demands

Metropolitan College has seen a tremendous increase in enrollment since opening in January 2010. The college serves 150 working adults in the Charlotte area, providing accelerated degree programs in criminology, social work and business administration. The Gain Your Edge Certificate Series offers opportunities for adults to earn certificates that increase their marketability through professional development.

Online liberal studies classes began in spring 2011 at Metropolitan College, in conjunction with Learning House, Inc. This new platform offers added convenience for students enrolled in general education courses.

The college continues to reach out to community organizations to offer innovative educational and professional development opportunities, including the Lunch and Learn Series with the Northwest Chapter of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce. Keynote speakers covered topics ranging from networking and marketing to the University’s Gain Your Edge Business Certificate Series.

Metropolitan College is offering customized Spanish training for the real estate, public service and other sectors of the community. The college also worked with the Latino American Women’s Association and Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools to offer biweekly training for CMS senior students completing their required senior exit project. This initiative consistently brought many Hispanic students and their families to campus. As a result, two of these students received LAWA scholarships.

Clinton Maclin, a social work major at Metropolitan College, is working on a business plan to form a nonprofit organization to serve the needs of homeless men.
The Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) College continues its strong focus on undergraduate applied research in market-driven areas such as homeland security, cyber security, bioinformatics, robotics and parasitology. In 2010-2011, the STEM College received more than $4 million in federal grants to support these disciplines.

STEM College is receiving national notoriety as a model for contemporary and market-driven STEM programs. It ranks in the top one percent in graduating African Americans in computer and information sciences among all universities and colleges in the U.S., according to 2004-2011 data from Diverse Issues in Higher Education.

The college continues to grow in scope and enrollment with approximately 20 percent of the JCSU student population choosing a STEM major. Retention also has risen during the past two years, with an 85 percent freshman-to-sophomore average retention rate. Females represent half of the STEM student body, which is significantly higher than the national average of 12 to 15 percent.

Future plans call for a $27 million science center to fulfill the college’s vision of preparing students for market-driven graduate programs such as master and doctorate programs in bioinformatics, homeland security, cyber security, renewable energy and medical informatics.
Commencement May 8, 2011
Nomzamo Nobandla Winifred “Winnie” Madikizela-Mandela

Under clear blue skies, 257 excited graduates of the Class of 2011 – the largest graduating class in recent history – turned their ceremonial tassels, marking the start of a new chapter in their young lives on May 8, 2011 in the Irwin Belk Complex on campus.

The message of leading by example in service to the world was punctuated by a powerful, heartfelt speech given by commencement speaker Nomzamo Nobandla Winifred “Winnie” Madikizela-Mandela. A current member of the South African Parliament, Madikizela-Mandela endured incredible hardship under the oppressive regime of apartheid and spent more than 50 years as part of the South African liberation movement. “It’s important,” she said, “to remember the incredible sacrifices made by individuals for freedom. We remember the scores of South Africans who laid down their lives so that we could be free … Others dared to fight so that we can enjoy the freedoms we sometimes take for granted.”

For her steadfast determination and transformative leadership, the University presented Madikizela-Mandela the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.
The University broke ground May 15, 2011 on Mosaic Village, part of an exciting new venture to revitalize the Northwest Corridor, spanning from Center City to the University gates. The project is the brainchild of the Beatties Ford Road Task Force, a University-led group of businesses, developers, residents and city authorities who are charting a course for revitalizing the West End. The $16 million 124,000-square-foot mixed-use facility under construction at 1601 West Trade Street features 80 apartment-style suites on four floors and will accommodate 300 students. Each unit will be equipped with a washer/dryer, kitchen and den. Every floor will have a common area and inner courtyard.

Inspired by the area’s rich history and unmatched resilience, JCSU’s Mosaic Village has carefully been sculpted by the cultural influence of jazz music, seen and heard at the nearby historic Excelsior Club. The rhythmic progression of the building pulls from the jazz aesthetic and its improvisational, yet structured, nature. A study of how the layers of music can inform and compose the layers of architecture produces an array of breaks, riffs, vamps, bridges and improvs in physical form. Following these rules from the realm of jazz, the public and physical realm of Mosaic Village becomes an architectural composition that respects its history, while chartering a new path for the Historic West End community.

A project like Mosaic Village is designed to attract new businesses that will benefit from residents living in high-density housing. For added convenience, plans include a 400-car parking deck, 6,500-square-feet of retail space and a 4,000-square-foot green roof. The facility’s design by Neighboring Concepts reflects a vibrant mosaic of color and a modern style that fits the University’s urban landscape. Scheduled to open in fall 2012, it is under construction by Balfour Beatty Construction and Shelco Inc.

Linking the Mosaic Village to the main campus and Uptown Charlotte is the Gold Rush, a free shuttle bus that began service in February 2011. Ridership is already picking up speed, up 30 percent, as more students, faculty and staff enjoy the free ride to and from campus.

Mosaic Village is a public-private partnership between JCSU, the Griffin family of Griffin Brothers Tires, Wheels and Automotive and the city of Charlotte. It is a concrete example of positive change taking place on campus and in the surrounding community. Mosaic Village has been designed as a sustainable facility that promotes diversity, mobility, identity, history and vitality.

We are grateful to our many community partners who are helping West Trade Street experience a rebirth of activity and momentum. This project is one more step toward fulfilling the University’s role as a private institution with a public purpose.
Mosaic Village Rising
JCSU connects with the Charlotte business community

Johnson C. Smith University works with small business owners and surrounding communities through the Center for Applied Leadership and Community Development. This new academic department conducts research and organizes groups around the area’s most pressing social and economic issues.

The Center for Applied Leadership and Community Development and the Smith Institute for Applied Research will conduct a joint project to study new and expanded ways of thinking about community engagement and economic empowerment in the Northwest Corridor of Charlotte.

Dr. Katherine Loflin, senior research fellow in the Smith Institute Center of Excellence, has been hired as lead consultant for the Soul of the Northwest Corridor Initiative. The initiative is adapted from the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation’s Soul of the Community project, a three-year partnership between the Gallup Poll and the foundation to survey and research 26 communities across the nation. The University is taking the national program to the neighborhood level and developing programming that will specifically benefit the Northwest Corridor.

JCSU’s first step off campus came in September 2010 when it opened the doors to The Arts Factory on West Trade Street. It is also the University’s first step toward revitalizing the Historic West End. Housed in the center is a new major in visual and performing arts, which is part of the University’s plan to grow enrollment through new academic programs.

Inside the renovated 14,000-square-foot building, students have access to a dance studio, black box theater and facilities for graphic arts and filmmaking. Thanks to the partnerships formed with the Charlotte arts community, The Arts Factory is now a reality and a visible sign of our investment in the community. Partnering organizations include the North Carolina Dance Theatre and the Harvey B. Gantt Center for African-American Arts + Culture.

Johnson C. Smith University is working with officials from the city of Charlotte and several corporate partners to construct a 5,760-foot HealthPlex center on campus to be used by the public. This groundbreaking venture for the University and the community is designed to promote health, wellness and fitness.

The HealthPlex will be built near Brayboy Gymnasium and will feature a fitness center, two multi purpose rooms with televisions and computer technology for educational purposes, a kitchenette for nutritional cooking demonstrations, as well as locker rooms. A full line of services offered at the HealthPlex will help people reach their personal health and fitness goals.
Passport to the World

The annual Passport to the World Cultural Extravaganza promotes diversity and helps strengthen the University’s relationship with multicultural communities in the metropolitan Charlotte area. Attendees experience different cultures, food and entertainment. The events feature cultural presentations from Africa, Asia, Germany, Latin America and Brazil.

Johnson C. Smith University not only invites other cultures to campus, also encourages students to travel abroad and experience other cultures firsthand. To make that opportunity more attainable, the University assists students with the first step – getting a passport.

During the 2010-2011 academic year, 210 students obtained passports through the University’s program. Representatives from the U.S. Postal Service came on campus to guide students through the process. As a result, 15 students studied abroad during the year in Senegal, Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic and China.
Center for Applied Leadership and Community Development raises the bar on community engagement

Since its inception in 2009, the Center for Applied Leadership and Community Development (CALCD) has served more than 3,000 people, held 30 trainings and workshops and developed more than 50 partnerships with local groups. Trust and communication have increased with residents in the Beatties Ford Road/Northwest Corridor, as well as across the Charlotte and Mecklenburg County region. Community engagement also has been enhanced by an award-winning student community service program where curricular and co-curricular activities are combined to expand learning experiences.

The center is in the early stages of implementing a Public Leadership Development Program through a $250,000 grant from the James S. and John L. Knight Foundation. Five students are participating as Knight Fellows in Phase I of the grant’s pilot program, serving as researchers under a partnership with City Councilman James Mitchell and the National League of Cities.

Other grants have been awarded to develop additional programs. Another Public Leadership Development Program has been made possible, enabling the center to administer the Mecklenburg African-American Community Fund and oversee its giving activities to local non-profit organizations.

In response to current issues in public education, the center provided technical assistance to the Coalition for Strengthening Community Education in Charlotte in its mission to educate parents and the community about issues of inclusion, diversity and equity as it relates to the public education system in Charlotte. In January 2011, the coalition held a gathering of 172 parents and other interested residents, including Mayor Anthony Foxx, County Commissioner Jennifer Roberts and County Commissioner Vilma Leake.

The Center for Applied Leadership and Community Development continues to help the University assist 12 neighborhoods near campus with revitalization efforts through a $600,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development–Office of University Partnership. Seven of the 15 homes to be renovated have been completed.

During 2010-2011, 87 individuals completed the requirements for personal money management and home buyers education programs offered through the center. This program is also provided through the HUD partnership.

The Women Entrepreneur Program at the center serves women in the Northwest Corridor and at Johnson C. Smith University who are operating or want to start a micro-enterprise or small business. The curriculum includes topics from finance for small business owners to creating a meaningful brand. In 2010-2011, the center graduated 32 women entrepreneurs who have started or are operating small businesses.

Through the Off-Duty Officer Patrol Program, off-duty Charlotte Mecklenburg Police Department officers were hired to address some of the high crime areas within the service area and close proximity to campus. A database was created to track the types of incidents and percentages of decrease and/or increase in crime and incidents along the corridor. During 2010-2011, 11 officers logged 1,377 patrol hours, working with neighborhood leaders and residents to identify and cover areas that have potential for crime and incidents.
A $299,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Justice’s Office on Violence Against Women established the Johnson C. Smith University’s Alliance Against Violence Toward Women. Dr. Dezette Johnson, assistant professor of social work, is directing the three-year project.

The alliance is actively working to form a campus-community coalition to reduce violent crimes against women. To achieve its mission, the group is charged with establishing prevention and educational programming, training members of Judicial Affairs and increasing overall awareness on campus.

The Office of Residence Life embarked on an energy conservation competition in 2011 as a first step toward creating a sustainable campus. The competition challenged students in the residence halls to become more aware of energy use and consumption and to learn how to take responsibility for reducing energy use. The male students in Carter Hall won the competition with their creative ideas for conserving energy by turning off unneeded appliances and powering down at certain times during the day.

Nineteen JCSU students benefitted by one-on-one mentoring as part of the Wachovia Wells Fargo Foundation Mentoring Across Difference Program. The mentoring opportunity, made possible by the Women’s Inter-Cultural Exchange and Johnson C. Smith University, is funded by the Wachovia Wells Fargo Foundation. It is designed to develop students’ leadership and communication skills by putting them in touch with senior-level professionals.

The Student Support Services Program awarded more than $57,000 in grant aid to 41 Pell-eligible students who have unmet financial obligations. First-generation college students make up 98 percent of the student body and 70 percent are also low-income students. As a result, families are often overwhelmed with the financial requirements and processes of attending college. They are often unable to pay the amount needed for validation. The program designs a plan for each student that ensures their financial success at Johnson C. Smith University. After underclassmen have been serviced, aid is offered to upperclassmen.

Philanthropy helps transform JCSU

Johnson C. Smith University is rising to the occasion as it transforms into Charlotte’s premier independent urban university. The progress Johnson C. Smith University has enjoyed this past year would not have been possible without the dedication and support of alumni and friends.

During 2010-2011, the University further strengthened its financial standing with gifts that support students and facilities. Such support enables the University to continue its long legacy of producing compassionate and forward-thinking leaders.

Charitable giving to Johnson C. Smith University totaled $7,561,130 for FY 2011. Unrestricted gifts to the JCSU Fund accounted for 57 percent of total giving, with the remaining 43 percent primarily designated for academic programs, faculty and student support, and revitalization efforts along the West Trade/Beatties Ford Road Corridor.

The Duke Endowment and UNCF continued their strong advocacy and support of the University’s strategic direction with gifts totaling $4,432,000 and $333,554, respectively, to support enrollment management, scholarship, capital campaign planning, the Center for Applied Leadership and Community Development, the Metropolitan College and the JCSU Fund.

Broad-based support

Corporate, foundation and organization gifts totaled $2,089,360, a seven percent increase over the prior year. Collectively, this group provided more than $353,000 in expendable scholarship support to JCSU students. Individual support in other areas was substantial. Most notable was a $360,000 Cato Corporation grant that recognizes excellence in teaching by JCSU faculty. The Cato Par Excellence Endowed Teaching Award not only provides an annual stipend to a deserving faculty member, but also funds professional development activities within the faculty member’s academic department. The Wells Fargo Foundation confirmed once again its confidence in the University’s efforts to revitalize the West Trade/Beatties Ford Road corridor by contributing an additional $250,000 to supplement its FY 2010 gift of $500,000. Finally, the Arthur Vining Davis Foundation invested $250,000 to assist the Center for Applied Leadership and Community Development in its outreach to African-American communities in the University’s target region.

| Giving Organizations | $243,009 |
| Foundations | $727,404 |

| UNCF | $333,554 |
| Duke | $4,432,000 |
The Annual Arch of Triumph Gala, the University’s signature fundraising event, grossed more than $230,000 for the JCSU Fund this past year. The third annual gala celebrated the 144th anniversary of the University’s founding and recognized five 2011 Arch of Triumph Award Honorees representing excellence in their fields and a commitment to serving their communities: Hill Harper, Carlenia G. Ivory, Charles L. Curry and Michael Marsicano.

The event brought together alumni, staff, community and corporations to support scholarships, teaching and learning initiatives and other programs vital to providing a quality education to our students. JCSU appreciates presenting sponsor Wells Fargo, the more than 70 table sponsors and all who made this year’s gala such a great success. Since its inception, the event has raised more than $622,000.

Alumni support is a key indicator of a university’s financial strength, and we are extremely grateful for the generosity of our dedicated alumni. Below is a list of the 2010-2011 1867 Giving Societies inductees:

Shirley J. Hughes serves on the Johnson C. Smith University Board of Trustees, chairs the Institutional Advancement Committee and is a member of the Executive Committee. She is a former corporate executive, having retired in April 2005 as an Officer and Senior Vice President of Human Resources at Minneapolis-based Ceridian Corporation, an information services company (formerly Control Data Corporation). She also served as Vice President, Human Resources for Mercy Health Services from 1994-1998 (now Trinity Health), a multibillion-dollar and multi-state health care provider headquartered in Farmington Hills, Mich.

Hughes graduated from Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, with a B.A. in political science. She currently serves on the boards of directors of Coe College, Second Harvest (an affiliate of Feeding America) in St. Paul, Minn.; the Foundation for Blue Cross Blue Shield of Minnesota; and Graywolf Press. She is a member of the Minnesota Women’s Economic Roundtable, the Minneapolis-St. Paul Chapter of the Links, Inc. and the Minneapolis-St. Paul Chapter of Girlfriends, R, Inc.

She is passionately committed to JCSU and started an endowed scholarship in her name. A regular contributor to the JCSU Fund, Hughes said: “The vision and focus of the board, Dr. Carter, faculty and staff on excellence is moving JCSU from a good to a great university, preparing its graduates to succeed in a global society. Once a course of action is determined, things move rapidly and results are achieved. More importantly, this HBCU provides its students with a sense of self and of confidence to successfully navigate and create positive futures. I can think of no return on investment (ROI) better than in the young people attending JCSU.”

Kevin A. Henry joined Lance Incorporated in 2010 and is responsible for human resources, community affairs, government relations, employment related legal and communications functions. In December 2010, Kevin was named Chief Human Resources Officer of the merged company which was renamed Snyder’s-Lance, Inc. The company started the Snyder’s-Lance Annual Scholarship and internship at JCSU in 2011.

Prior to his current role, Kevin was Senior Vice President and Chief Human Resources Officer of Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Consolidated. In this role, Kevin was responsible for all aspects of the company’s human resources functions.

A graduate of Cornell University’s School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Kevin serves on the boards of Johnson C. Smith University and The Harvey B. Gantt Center for African American Arts + Culture. He is Chairman of the JCSU Board of Visitors and Chairman of the Board of Trustees for Charlotte Latin Day School.

Kevin has been recognized by the Charlotte Business Journal as a Top 40 under 40 Award Winner. He was awarded the 2009 Whitney M. Young Jr. Award by the Urban League of Central Carolinas for his philanthropic work in the community and leadership in the areas of diversity and inclusion.
